

Copyright Statement

The purpose of the Whittier Historical Photograph Collection is to provide materials for personal, scholarly, research and educational purposes only, and to preserve the visual history of Whittier. Whittier Public Library owns the rights to some of the images in the Whittier Historical Photograph Collection. Some materials may be subjected to copyright restrictions and be protected by the U.S. Copyright Law (Title 17, U. S. C.) Photographs were donated to the library and are meant for non-commercial use only. Redistribution, reproduction, publication, transmission of materials other than fair use, in whole or any part, requires written permission from Whittier Public Library.

The library reserves the right to grant or withhold the permission and this is determined on a case by case basis. Additional permissions may be required. Users are solely responsible for determining and acquiring the required additional permissions, and paying any additional fees. Further restrictions may include but not be limited to the rights of copyright, privacy and publicity. Credit line is required to indicate the source of the image. This should include any known information about the image including the photographer, the collection, and the Whittier Public Library as the owning organization. The user may be liable for copyright infringement if it is later determined that the materials have been in excess of "fair use."

While every effort has been made in compiling and verifying the content of the digitized materials, Whittier Public Library, its staff, and any other party involved in creating, producing and delivering this site is not to be held liable for the accuracy, reliability or completeness of the information, and is not held responsible for its improper or incorrect use. Responsibility for any fair use rests exclusively with the user.